

ARTS

The Toronto International Deaf Film and Arts Festival held a three-day workshop for Grade 11 and 12 students at the Ernest C. Drury School for the Deaf this week. The workshop, which wrapped up yesterday, included participants from E.C. Drury and other Provincial deaf schools, as well as guest instructors. At right, costume designer Tatiana Hutinec (right) shows one of her costumes (a frog for a children's opera) — modeled by former E.C. Drury student-turned-actress Amanda Richer — to 12th graders Tristan Kong and Sarah Potter. Above, students listen to one of the speakers. Bottom left, guest instructor Jevon Whetter from Los Angeles gives tips on how to pitch a story idea. Bottom right, guest instructor Kaleen Feeney — also from L.A. — shares some advice with workshop-goers.

GRAHAM PAINE / CANADIAN CHAMPION

Film festival comes to life

